Bulb Care Information Sheet

How to care for your bulbs
after your plants have flowered

Welcome Bulb Buddies!

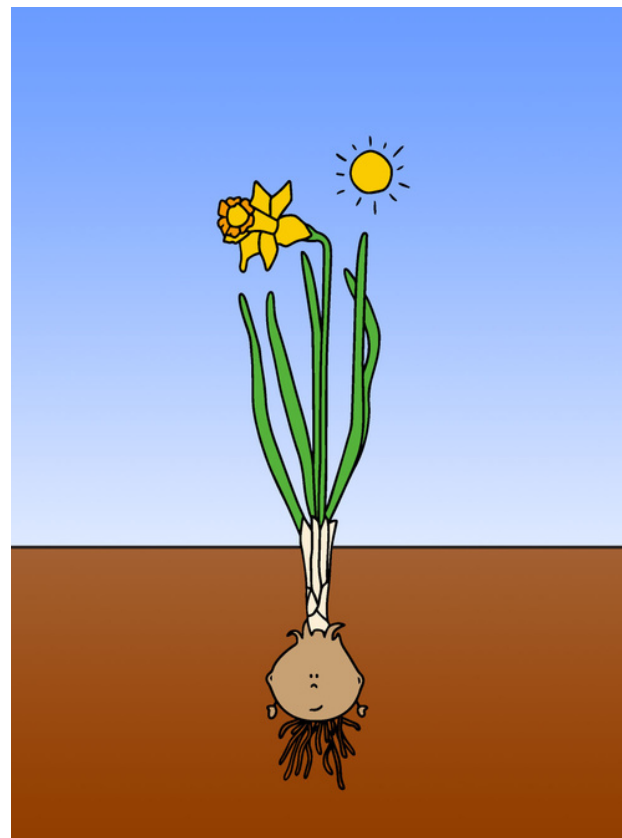

This instruction sheet will show you how to care for your bulbs after your plants have flowered in the Spring.

Very Important!

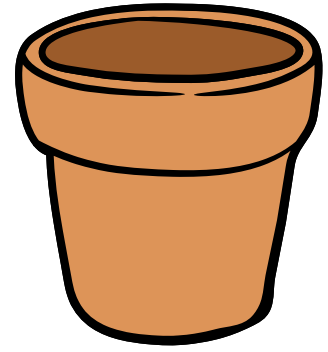

Do not trim or re-plant your bulb until seven weeks after flowering. Leave it outside in the sunshine as this allows your bulb to store energy for the following year.

Once your bulb has flowered you may wish to take it home, plant it in your school or even re-use your pot to grow something else? Read through the instructions below to make a decision on how you would like to look after your bulb.

How To:

Keep Your Bulb in a Pot

- Trim back the leaves.
- Store your pot outside and out of the way until the following spring - when your flowers will start to grow again!
- Make sure your soil doesn't dry out over the summer by watering when required.

Empty Your Pot

- Trim back the leaves.
- Empty your pot onto some newspaper and look for your bulbs. Shake them to remove any excess soil.
- Inspect your bulbs, only keep the ones that are healthy looking and of a good size. Discard those that are soft or rotten.
- Every few years bulbs double. When they double will be joined together. If this is the case, pull them away from one another – very carefully. When they are doubling they make fewer flowers because they are putting their energy into making more bulbs. By separating them you should get more flowers.

How To:

Plant Your Bulbs in Your Garden or School

- Follow the instructions on how to empty your pot.
- Find an area to plant the bulbs - choose a sunny or lightly shaded position.
- Dig a hole for each bulb that is twice as deep as the height of your bulb. Make sure the shoot is pointing upwards and the roots downwards.
- Plant each bulb 2 or 3 bulb widths apart.
- Your bulbs should now flower year after year. Divide them every 3 years to increase flowering.
- You could now re-use your pot to plant a summer herb or flower!

Dry out your bulbs and store them until the following autumn

- If you don't have a garden and you want to use your pot to grow something else you may wish to dry out your bulbs and store them over the summer.
- Follow the instructions on how to empty your pot.
- Lay bulbs on a tray or newspaper to dry for 1 week. Place in a labelled paper bag and store in a cool place until they are ready to plant again in November.
